Ratified by the Ministry of Interior in Letter No. 0980151068 on August 12, 2009

- Article 1 This regulation is promulgated in accordance with Article 5 of the MOE Regulations Regarding International Students Undertaking Studies in Taiwan.
- Article 2 An international student, as indicated in this regulation, refers to a person not classified as an overseas Chinese student nor possessing Republic of China (hereafter ROC) citizenship.
- Article 3 Upon completion of a course of study at a school in Taiwan, an international student's admission to the Central Police University (hereafter CPU) is to be handled in a manner identical to that for local students.
- Article 4 International students studying at CPU shall comply with the institution's academic system. Special students shall remain enrolled for at least one semester. Regular students shall enroll in appropriate programs and their minimum required years of coursework are:
- A. undergraduate program: four years
 - B. technical program: two years
 - C. master's program: two years
 - D. doctoral program: three years
- Article 5 Applicants must demonstrate proficiency in the Chinese language. Regular students shall submit a diploma or degree issued by a senior high school or university.
- Article 6 International students shall submit the following documents when seeking the admission to CPU:
- A. A completed application form.
 - B. A copy of the highest degree obtained (a bachelor's degree for a graduate program, a high school diploma for an undergraduate program) and an official transcript in English. A transcript and diploma in both English and Chinese shall be presented to an ROC embassy or representative office in the applicant's home country for authentication.

C. Two letters of recommendation. One shall be issued by the applicant's government and the other by the applicant's Chinese-language teacher. Both are to address applicant's aims and background information.

D. A health certificate covering checkups for diseases such as HIV.

E. A study plan written in Chinese or English.

F. A certificate documenting sufficient financial support.

After these documents are reviewed, qualified students will be issued a letter of admission. International students shall present the proof of medical/accident insurance at registration.

All international students are required to take a Mandarin Chinese oral test. If necessary, the exam may be conducted by an ROC embassy or representative office. All admission applications for CPU must be submitted through the ROC overseas offices.

Article 7 International students (both special and regular) shall prepare the items required for admission and pay associated fees in accordance with regulations for local students.

Article 8 After admission to CPU, international students are eligible for Chinese language and history courses so as to make their studies easier. These may be taken during the first month of their first school term or at another more suitable time.

Article 9 Grants for international students (special and regular) are to be issued in the manner applicable to local students.

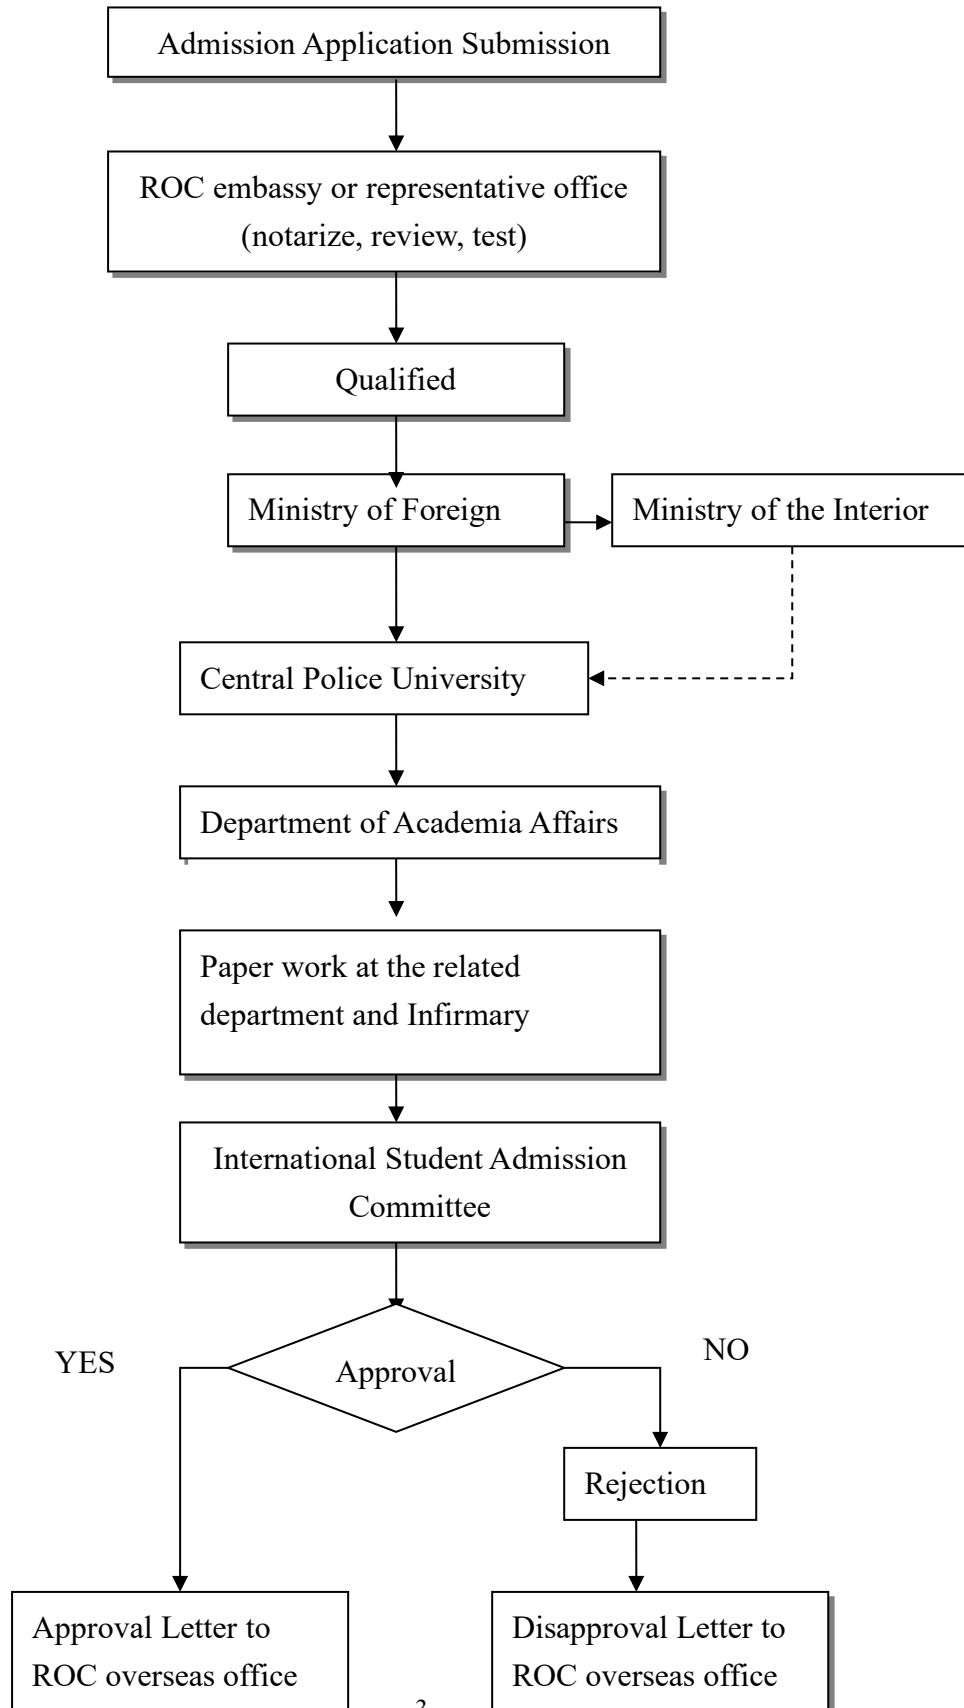

Article 10 International students (special and regular) are to live with, take classes, enjoy the same rest periods as, and test with local students.

Article 11 Regulations concerning international students' (special and regular) daily routines shall be the same as those for local students.

Article 12 International students must, while attending or auditing additional courses, also complete all required courses.

Article 13 International students in regular programs will be granted a diploma when they have fulfilled all degree requirements. Those in special programs will be granted a certificate at the end of their course of study.
